Japan Not to Send Troops to Manchuria

> By the Associated Press Tokyo, Nov. 28

THE general staff of the army is advocating the sending of additional Japanese troops to Man-churia, but the Cabinet has disapproved the move.

Baron Shidehara, the Foreign Minister, says Japan will not take any part in the troubles in China than to protect the lives and property of its nationals.

United States of Europe at End of Locarno Road, Says Dr. Breitscheid

By Special Cable

BERLIN, Nov. 28-The passing of the Locarno bill, it may be said without hesitation, is welcomed by an overwhelming majority of the German people. "The people of all nations—perhaps even contrary to their governments— want peace, and Germany cannot stand apart and neglect supporting such international ideals," Frau Clara Mende, one of the most influential members of the German People's Party told the cor-respondent of The Christian Science Monitor after the voting had taken place yesterday.

Another member of her party de-clared before the House that the Locarno Pact was the beginning of a peaceful solution of the Rhineland questions, while Dr. Rudolf Breitscheid, one of the leaders of the Social Democrats, even went as far relative strengths of the parties fa- as to declare that at the other end of voring and parties opposing that the road starting from Locarno was recognition within the Czech coaliwelcomed the fact that henceforth political disputes among European nations would be settled peacefully.

The speakers of most parties dur-ing the debate on Locarno, however, declared that a further occupation of German territory was incompatible with the "Locarno spirit."

"We won't cease to declare that there is no longer a necessity for military occupation of the Rhineland, since France' security is guar anteed, and that the entire occupied area must be evacuated," Dr. Breitscheid said, during the debate in the Reichstag, and Dr. Albert Zapi member of the German People's period of occupation if it fulfilled its obligations and, according to the Treaty of Locarno, could demand that this question be settled by a court of arbitration.

Peking remained outwardly calm in spite of this culmination of the spectacular march of events which has made the anti-foreign Feng practically master of Peking and threatens to eliminate Chang from the political arena.

While dispatches from Mukden said Chang Tso-Lin was determined to fight to the last, other defections among his followers were reported, making his stand seem like a forlorn

The chief executive, Marshal Tuan Chi-Jui, still remains in Peking, in spite of his desire, expressed to the Cabinet, to resign and free himself of the imbroglic into which North-ern China has been thrown.

Already the leaders in the coup against Chang appear to be dividing their spoils. # REAL FREEDOM BASED ON LIFE OF SERVICE, SAYS SIDNEY WEBB

No Universal Panacea Exists, He Avers, for Freedom-Every Individual Succeeds to Heritage of Enormous Value in Collective Experience

Special from Monitor Bureau | in favor of education; therefore LONDON, Nov. 17 - "Economic Fabian lecture given by Mr. Sidney Webb at the Wesleyan Mission Hall, Kingsway, recently.

Discussing the various kinds of restraints or impediments which in-Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the terfere with freedom, Mr. Webb referred to constitutional provisions for the protection of minorities; adding:

But there is a still stronger re-straint of individual freedom—pub-lic opinion, from which they suffer, without knowing it, in the United States. There is such a strong convention that it is very difficult to break away from it. There is no remedy for that except by the growth of tolerance.

It is the rise of the conception of It is the rise of the conception of economic freedom during the pass century which has been altering European politics. The keynote of Conservatism is stability—a fine word, but failing adequately to recognize the need of change in a changing world. The keynote of Liberalism is liberty, but a certain kind of individual freedom tends to ignore other kinds of freedom—other people's freedom.

The keynote of the Labor Party is people's freedom.

The keynote of the Labor Party is democracy. You may have the best possible voting machine without getting freedom or equality. A democracy of peasants could not manage a railway, a bank, or a university. Nor do you necessarily best serve the future of the community by giving votes to adults who, if each votes according to his own interest, may not sufficiently consider the children, who are one-third and the most important part of the community.

Freedom for All Formulating, briefly, a policy o program of freedom for everybody, Mr. Webb put first collectivism power vested in the whole commu-nity and exercised for the good of all. He said:

Law is the mother of freedom. The test of a law is: Does it enlarge freedom? The rule of the road, for instance, does. Some things need to be done on a large scale, and hence need a national government. Vocational organizations tend to ignore the future of the community.

Touching on the law of diminishing returns, Mr. Webb said: You cannot apply any abstract principle logically, ruthlessly, to the end. That is what they are apt to do in France and the United States. America is, in favor of equality; therefore everybody must be equal;

No Universal Panacea To 'get the maximum of economic, as of all other freedom, you need a combination of things. There is no universal panacea, no single plan, by which the world can be run so as to secure universal freedom—social, political, economic. Socialism, Liberalism, Conservatism have their characteristic defects. characteristic defects.

It cannot be done by the distributive state, by making everybody equal in wealth; nor by an association of producers—the syndicalist state is an impossibility. But collectivism has been tried and has succeeded. It has saved the individual from wage-slavery, increased his health, looked after the non-adult, secured increased freedom, provided, opportunity for initiative and the satisfaction of legitimate desires.

Having got to that point, are we

and the satisfaction of legitimate desires.

Having got to that point, are we satisfied? Mr. Bertrand Russell is reported to have said that the freedom we ought to seek is the right to live as we choose, and think as we choose, where our doing so does not prevent others from doing likewise. I am not satisfied with that. Rousseau said man is born free; I venture to say every individual is born in debt. We succeed to a heritage of enormous value. I feel a moral obligation, not to make the world poorer, or to pay my debt to the last farthing, but to add something to the collection, to the pool.

And do not let us think we can establish all the freedom we want by law. Do not let us debase the moral currency. The real declaration of independence is the right to live, to the pursuit of happiness for ourselves along with others, to a life of service for the benefit of the world; and it is that service which is perfect freedom.

Use of Surplus Funds

"The surplus funds of American citizens began to be invested in the bonds of foreign industries, as well as in the bonds of foreign governments. At the rate of at least $1,000,-000,000 a year such investments are being made, in Germany, in Canada, in South America and in other parts of the world. perity can be assured. There are two rays to balance a budget: increase revenue or cut down expenditure. The French are now taxed at about 20 per cent of the national revenue, whereas citizens in the United States are taxed only 11 per cent, and the tax is so heavy that a sizable addi-tion is out of the question.

Therefore, Mr. Moulton, said, the only way to balance the budget lies in a reduction of expenditure. France spends annually as follows: Interest on the public debt, 16,500,000,000 on pensions, 3,600,000,000; tary charges, 7,600,000,000; 7,600,000,000; 9,800,000,000; 8,000,000,000. restoration, only one of these items which can stand a reduction large enough to have any effect on balancing the outstanding bonds from 5 per cent sonable in her demands and conto 2 per cent, and thereby balance her budget." Mr. Moulton went on. "This, as I see it, is the only possible step for her to take. In addition, it may impose a surtax which difficult one. I believe that she has revenue by 1 or 2 per cent.

Easier Than Capital Levy "The reduction of interest payments from 5 to 2 per cent would cut out to the fullest possible extent." in very deeply on the small income on certain agricultural groups hold bonds and upon the banks. It would be a heroic measure, entailing considerable sacrifice and financial difficulty, but would not be as severe in its effects as a deflation and financial panic, such as that through which Germany has passed. It would probably be easier than a capital levy.
"There seem to be but two courses for France: to pass through the evils of deflation, or to balance her budget by means of a cut in payments on the erest payments, or whether they will allow matters to drift into the otherwise inevitable deflation, is a political question which I as an econnist cannot answer.

I do know, however, that the new Finance Minister, Louis Loucheur, favors a reduction in interest payments. The time is ripe for Loucheur and Aristide Briand to put through the measure, and if they

Situation in France point-

"The reduction in taxes which we have already enjoyed, and the further reduction so hopefully looked for this year, are due in no small part to the collection of money due from foreign loans through the skillful and firm negotiations of the World War Foreign Debt Commission. While there is no direct connection it is suggestive that the proposed reduction in the income and profit taxes under the new tax bill saves almost the same amount of money for our taxpayers as will be paid to the Treasury this year on account of the foreign loans.

"Creditors are not often popular, and if the comment in Europe about America and the war debts has not always been favorable we need not be unduly worried. #### BRITISH CONSIDERING WHISKY EXPORT DUTY

By Cable from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Nov. 28-A scheme is under consideration here for raising additional government revenue by putting an export duty upon whisky. Great Britain sends abroad 7,000,000 gallons of proof spirits annually, of which a large proportion finds its way illicitly to the United States. Such a total, if taxed at the same men will have the courage to take the step involved in cutting down inon alcohol consumed in Great Britain, would, it is reckoned, produce £26,000,000 annually, but as this would be calculated to terminate the exports, a very much lower scale is all that is seriously discussed.

The scheme is not expected to materialize at present, owing to opposi-tion from the trade, but the fact that it is mooted illustrates the growing realization of the need for restric tion.

This is also indicated in remarks from the bench made by Samuel Pope, magistrate for North London. Referring to the drink cases, Mr. Pope said that there were vast numbers of people in Great Britain who would be better off under prohibition, "but we are a very old coun-try," he added, "and we worship indi-vidual liberty, and almost everything will be sacrificed in order that what we call individual liberty may flourish."

Rebels Hope to Wipe Out Recent Defeat in Syria

BEIRUT, Syria, Nov. 28 (A)-The rebel Druse tribesmen are answering fire signals from various high hills in the region of Rasheiya and are flocking down the mountainsides and from the villages to reinforce the bands of the leaders preparatory to further anticipated attacks by the French forces.

It is the desire of the Druses to wipe out the defeat which the French recently administered to them in Bika Valley and at Rasheiya. The French in an official communication admit that they expect another important operation.

Around Homs, in northern Syria. bandits are active. To meet the situation there French reinforcements from Tripoli are carrying out a forced march as the railway line between Homs and Ras Baalbek, to the south, has been cut. The Christians at Homs are seeking asylum in the foreign mission compounds or are in flight toward the Mediterra French reinforcements have ar-

MISS WHITNEY CALLS FOR A REHEARING

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (AP)-Charlotte Anita Whitney, convicted of violation of the California syndicalism law, again has applied to the Supreme Court for a re-hearing. The Court dismissed her appeal last month for want of jurisdiction. The petition for re-hearing de-clared the Court was in error when it ruled that no constitutional queswas involved.

In support of this contention, coun sel presented a voluminous review of the case seeking to show that the California law violated constitutional guarantees of freedom. It was argued that during trial in the lower courts that during trial in the lower courts constitutional questions were raised and that the Supreme Court should have disposed of the case on its merits in a written opinion covering specifically the question of the constitutionality of the California more forward Republican policy, made at the recent convention of the Republican Party.

The prisoners were released by six men who entered in the guise of civil guards bringing new prisoners. Upor being admitted they disarmed the sentries, gagged the wardens and championship came along, Yulbert Taft of Cincinnati, whose total rer resentation at the show was two horses, captured the championship ibbon with My Dear, who had tarted her career in this show in the novice class.

Lastly Thornton Empress, the property of Mrs. R. L. Benson of Princeton, N. J., completed the trio by capturing the middleweight division, as she had won the novice and open on previous days.

The Cathedral Cup was won by the erennial Silver Crest, owned and idden by Miss Sally Lanier.
But in the evening it was the international aspect that brought the show to its conclusion. The final session had been reserved for the military classes, and cavalry and artil-lery, with the New York State troop-ers, swept round the ring to the cheers of the crowd.

The greatest contest was a production of the Olympic Games equestrian test for the International Military Trophy, presented by the Breeding Bureau of the Jockey Club. Eight hurdles were erected, includ-ing a double set of heavy post and rail, three hurdles divided by about 10 feet, a wall, a double hedge and bar that closely resembled a water-jump, a triple bar, a picket fence and a high gate. Four nations, France, Belgium, Canada and the United three, ridden by separate officers. All horses were to go over the jumps, and the total score of the three horses of each nation determined the

Mr. Coolidge Receives Petition Asking for Investigation

Special from Monitor Bureau WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 - Porto WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — Porto Rican labor wants President Coolidge to do something to improve social and economic conditions in the island. In a petition said to have been signed by 13,000 Porto Ricans, and presented to the President by Santiago Iglesias, Spanish-speaking secretary of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, it is charged that three-fifths of the population lack permanent employment, that wages are low, and that there is discrimina-

Will Hold National Study Conference on Religions and Peace

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 - Thirty hurch and religious bodies are coperating in the National Study Conference on "The Churches and World Peace." scheduled to meet in Washington, D. C., Dec. 1 to 3.

The agenda includes a discussion of the following: "What are the Christian ideals and attitude with regard to war and peace?" "What ought the churches to do with re-spect to the problem of international peace?" "What sort of a nation-wide campaign of education ought the churches to undertake for the pronotion of peaceful sentiments?" By this method the churches of America will attempt to define a clearly cut and widely heralded policy of relationship to the State both during periods of peace and in the event of war.

During the last two years the major denominations of America major denominations of America have passed resolutions denouncing the war system. Organized warfare has been branded as "unchristian" and wholly inconsistent tian ethics. But as yet the denomina tions have spoken in their frag-mentary capacity, representing as they do only a portion of the whole church. Unhampered Discussion

The Washington Conference will bring the denominational peace agencies together. Out of this conference it is hoped will come a frontal attack of a united church upon the institution of legalized war-

Every shade of opinion and convic-tion will be heard. No attempt will be made to shield the conference from the airing of extreme views, either military or pacifist. The program has been set upon an inquiry

The delegated representatives of the several churches will not attempt to exhort each other in regard to war and peace, but to take up the most perplexing and difficult of these uestions for study.
The opening address will livered by Bishop McDowell of Wash-ington. During the three days that follow there will be eight sessions of study and discussion. The conference will break up into three groups for the consideration of the three major discussion of an act to institute the themes.

Questions for Review With respect to "findings" and recommendations "the conference will have no binding authority on the churches. These "findings" will be referred back to the denominational annual gatherings for each church to review and pass upon. They will have authority in each church only as they are adopted by The 20-page syllabus which has

The court observed that much time might have been saved if the prosecution had prepared its case, and brought in the records it needed. When the questioning was re-sumed, General Eltinge said there was no air service officer at present on the joint army-navy board.
"Is there a defense plan for the Pacific?" he was asked.

"Yes. For diplomatic reasons, however, it is kept entirely secret, and I don't believe it should ever be talked about."

The court took cognizance of the general's remarks about the extreme secrecy of the Pacific defense plan, and no effort was made to ask further about it.

SPRINGFIELD'S HELP

SOUGHT BY RAILROAD SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 28 (A) E. G. Buckland, vice-president and general counsel for the New Haven railroad system, yesterday called on Mayor F. C. Parker, seeking to enlist the city's support in the railroad company's plan to take over and re-habilitate the Springfield Street Rail-way system in order that it can be placed on a paying basis so that the bonds of its holding company may find sale.

Mayor Parker was not prepared to commit the city but sought from Mr Buckland more specific information as to the company's plans. Mr. Buckland informed him that it would be useless to go to the Legislature for authority to take control of the Springfield and Worcester trolley Hawaiian maneuvers a "success," ex-cept that they had to be curtailed "on port. The New Haven, he said, plans port. The New Haven, he said, plans to spend $1,000,000 here and the same sum in Worcester.

SENATOR BUTLER INDORSES COURT

Should Study World Tribunal, He Says, Before Taking Step

Favoring American entry into the Permanent Court of International Justice, but counseling careful consideration before such a step is taken, William M. Butler (R.), Senator from Massachusetts and chairmain of the Republican National Committee, outlined certain of his party's policies at a dinner of 300 members of the Norfolk County Republican Club at the Hotel Brunswick last night.

'We should take such an impor "We should take such an impor-tant step with reason and not with impulse," Mr. Butler said. "After considerable study I have concluded that the reservations for our entry first outlined by President Harding and Mr. Hugh's, and later accepted in their entirety by President Cool-idge, are in the right direction, and will adequately safeguard our par-ticipation."

There are many citizens, Mr. But-ler continued, who are apprehensive of a connection which may exist be-tween the World Court and the League of Nations, and to make the exact situation perfectly clear to the entire electorate ample discussion of the issue in the United States Senate and elsewhere is necessary. Citizens should be patient with the Senate if it seems to prolong discussion on the court, he said, for it does so only that all the facts and possibilities may be made sufficiently quote one: "Dualism" portrays a very young miss whose mature pianism belies her age and its symptoms." Space forbids the quotation of the other notes, which are equally enlightening.

Is this not returning to the good old days of the "Battle of Prague," and perhaps not quite so successfully? It was possible to hear the galloping hoofs of the horses and the thunder of the cannon, at least when the composer carrefully stated that they were supposed to be heard, but we must confess that we could see no particular connection between the piece Mr. Sheridan played and the "very young Miss' whose mature pianism belies her age and its symptoms." And so with the other numbers of this suite. As music, however, and apart from the interest of the suite. As music, however, and apart from the content on the content of the content of the content of the content on the content of the content of Miss' whose mature pianism belies her age and its symptoms." And so with the other numbers of this suife. As music, however, and apart from their ill chosen titles, these pieces are excellent. They give evidence of inventive faculty and they sound well on the piano.

The three silhouettes by the estimable Daniel Gregory Mason are not likely to cause wild excitement on the part of the hearer. They are but tepid music and their significance is negative.

Mr. Sheridan revives the belief that the art of playing the plano properly is not yet entirely a lost one. After the succession of piano pounders which each season brings forth, it was an exquisite pleasure to hear Mr. Sheridan play the instrument with a respect for its limitations, a comprehension of its resources and an adaptation of the musical thought of the composers to ment with a respect for its limitations, a comprehension of its resources and an adaptation of the musical thought of the composers to the means at hand for its expression. This, so it seems, should be the task of every pianist, but few indeed are those who are able to solve the problem so successfully as did Mr.

AUGUSTA, Me., Nov. 28 (P)—The Maine Public Utilities Commission has made public its decision on the petition of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company for an increase in rates. The increased revenue anustit by the telephone comrevenue sought by the telephone com-pany for this State was $660,000, which, after deduction of taxes and increased license payment, would be $516,862. The commission granted this with certain modifications, the total amount of which is not stated in the recent

in the report.

Included in these modifications were: "That for Bangor and Lewiston exchanges the two-party line for business unlimited service be continued at a rate not exceeding $4.75 a month"; that the Portland-West-brook district exchange be maintained at rates applicable to the Portland exchanges.

The commission reviews the valuation of the telephone company property in the State. One by George K.

Manson, the company's chief engineer, amounted to $18,047,082. Another by William F. Slander, 18 other, by William F. Sloan, consulting engineer, amounted to $18,360,-899. The commission after review of the valuation of the physical plant, deducted $143,790 from Manson's

Meanwhile, speculation is rife as to whether after all a formal peace will be signed with the Riff. It is now argued that there has strictly speaking never been any war in French Morocco. The troops of Abd-el-Krim came out of the Riff and attacked the French. It was necessary to drive them back. But this having been done, it is unnecessary to sign documents: it is merely for Abd-el-Krim to cease his unjustified aggression. There would indeed be many complications, perhaps of an international character, were Abd-el-Krim to be recognized as an independent chief. Poincaré sent the eloquent Senator to represent France at the League of Nations believes that the general conditions of security are such as to enable the European nations to relieve themselves of the military burden. The Locarno pacts undoubtedly hasten the moment when practical steps in this direction can be taken. It is felt, however, that similar accords should be drawn up in other regions of Europe—notably in the Balkans. Paul Boncour, who is greatest authority on this question on the French side, is anxious that whatever is done should be real and sincere. Steeg, who as the Résident Supérieur represents the civil authorities, thereupon plainly intimated that he did not admit that there had been in the legal sense any war—there had merely been an insurrection—and thus-pacification in fact was all that was required. At the same time he expressed himself ready to listen to any grievances and to remedy them. It remains to be seen whether this conception is sufficient. Technically lit may be correct but in practice it may prove to be more advantageous to give the Riff official recognition by an accord with Abd-el-Krim. Sport Innovation.

A permanent Secretary-General for sport has been appointed in France. This is an important innovation. There has hitherto existed an Underschell, who has been appointed, its one of the best-known figures in the French sporting world. He himself won distinction as an athlete and for many years was editor of the sporting page in the Figaro. It is now proposed to centralize the various services of physical education—physical education in the schools, physical education outside the schools, and

POLAND HEARS 'ABOUT LOCARNO

Count Skrzynski Says Pact Allows France to Come to Aid of Country

WARSAW, Nov. 6 (Special Correspondence)—Count Skrzynskl, in his recent report to the parliamentary commission on the results of the Locarno Conference recapitulated the important points of the pact, emphasizing the significance for Poland of the Rhine next het were France. of the Rhine pact between France and Germany. This clearly states that if Poland is attacked by Germany, France, according to her own valuation of the situation, can come to the aid of Poland. Moreover, the new allignce between France, and new alliance between France and Poland already announced in Lo-carno foresees that if Poland be attacked France is under the obligation to come to her aid and assist-

The method of settling disputes between Poland and Germany is identical with that between Germany and the other countries. Count Skrzynski said:

In the introduction to our agree-ment with Germany, it is fixed that we desire to settle all disputes by way of arbitration or conciliation, with the understanding that existing treaties cannot be the subject of any controversy, any difference of opinion or any decisions. As international tribunals are not competent to alter existing treaties a conciliation cannot lead to the alteration of any fundamental right of one state without mutual agreement. In other words, this introduction, which for greater solemnity will be signed by words, this infroduction, which for greater solemnity will be signed by Presidents Wojelechowski and Von Hindenburg, affirms mutual good will for the peaceful solution of disputes on the basis of the inviolability of existing treaties.

our alliance with France has been strengthened in Locarno, where an international intrument for safety and justice has been created. The Franco-Polish alliance takes its proper place there. While formerly it was insinuated that Poland was a hindrance toward the attainment of world peace, at present Poland is hindrance toward the attainment of world peace, at present Poland is the corner stone of this work, a pillar which cannot be removed, for otherwise the whole structure would tumble.

Without doubt the pact is not perfect, and a wide field is open to criticism. At the same time it is not a final result but a point of issue, a signpost, a proof of the peaceful intentions of the states represented at Locarno, an attempt to find an outlet from the difficult position in which the world is at present. A legal fort political and moral has been created, which will contribute to the feeling of the security and defense of the Polish state.

Why Greater Camden Real Estate Offers a

Profitable Investment

The growth and development that Greater Cam-den is now enjoying are natural. For a century Camden waited impatiently believed the barrier that stood between this busy city and Philadelphia and growth. While Philadelphia increased in size and its real estate values rose in direct ratio with its population, Camden and all of South Jersey lagged behind.

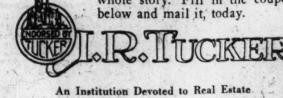

Then the barrier was lifted, the river was spanned. Vital activity supplanted lethargy . . . And Greater Camden's Real Estate values are reflecting this change. We believe these values will continue to riseuntil Philadelphia's basis of value is equaled, because we believe there is economic stability behind them.

As a suggestion, find out how the J. R. Tucker offices can serve you—can show you how to take advantage of these increasing values.

Rumanian Minister Tells of Gratitude for Educational Freedom

SOFIA, Nov. 10 (Special Correspondence)—The personnel of the Rumanian Legation went the other day to attend an unusual event in the little frontier town of Gorna Djumaia—the opening of a Rumanian school under the auspices of the Rumanian Ministry of Education. The school took the place of an old The school took the place of an old institution which had been standing in Gorna Djumaia for several gen-

Among the speakers was Mr. ilchiurescu, the Rumanian Minister in Sofia, who pointed out that it is not always that a minority, like the Rumanian minority in Bulgaria, is permitted to have its own school on foreign soil, and Serbia has closed all the Rumanian schools in Macedonia. Mr. Bilchiurescu thanked the Bulgarian majority in Bulgaria for Bulgarian majority in Bulgaria for its generosity in permitting the Rumanians of the community of Gorna Djumaia to have their own schools. Mr. Alexieff, the district Governor, in replying to the Rumanian Minis-ter, recalled the ancient friendship between the two peoples, which though it had been subjected to a strain during the World War, would, he predicted, be strengthened in the future. He called attention to the fact that the Rumanian portion of the community of Gorna Djumais are not the only foreign people who are permitted to conduct their own ools outside the control of the Bulgarian Bureau of Education. There are in Gorna Djumaia also Greek. Jewish and Turkish schools conducted by the respective communities. He challenged the Rumanians to cite as an example the similar treatment of schools and churches in any other Balkan

The personnel of the Rumanian Legation at Sofia spent the day in Gorna Djumaia. They returned to their posts highly impressed with the tolerance of the Bulgarian community and firmly assured of the future of Bulgarian and Rumanian friendship. On his return to Sofia Mr. Bilchiurescu informed the For-eign Office of his complete satisfac-tion with the hospitality of the little frontier town.

Our nation and our state have always offered an example of good treatment of minorities. And if the other Balkan states indicated the same good will and a guarantee of the rights of minorities, they would contribute greatly and decisively to the happiness of these minorities within their own borders.

The Superior Fabric for Closed Motor Car Upholstery

EXPERIENCE has taught thousands of motorists that mohair velvet, Cand particularly Chase VELMO, the Perfected Mohair Velvet, is the most beautiful, comfortable and durable upholstery fabric for closed cars.

Chase VELMO is a first quality, rich, deep pile Velvet woven from mohair fleece—two and one-half times stronger than wool; much stronger than cotton.

Long after the beauty of ordinary fabrics (not made of mohair) has vanished, VELMO looks as good as new.

You settle back in luxurious ease on cushions of VELMO—as soft and yielding as those of your favorite easy chair. Comfort is yours in all seasons and for every mile you travel.

Both men and women admire the soft, velvety surface and lovely colors of VELMO—enjoy the dignified elegance it lends to a car.

When re-sale time arrives, VELMO proves a real investment. Because the upholstery has not depreciated the car commands a far higher price than one with low-cost, travel-worn upholstery.

VELMO is standard equipment on many closed cars; but, if necessary, specify VELMO for your car and pay $20 to $60 more for this—the finest upholstery material. When you re-sell or turn in the car you will, no doubt, receive $50 to $150 more for it. No other fabric affords you this extra value to such an extent as does VELMO.

Remember the trademark name, "VELMO," identifying the product of Sanford Mills where standards have been rigidly maintained. These mills have refused to produce inferior mohair velvets which could not be guaranteed as is VELMO—the superior fabric for closed car upholstery.

CHASE VELMO . Made by SANFORD MILLS, SANFORD, MAINE L. C. CHASE & CO., Selling Agents, BOSTON, New York, Detroit, San Francisco, Chicago

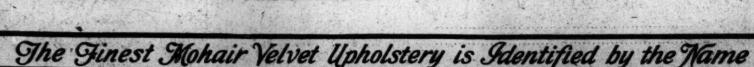

Mohair, from which Chase VELMO is made, is the silky, lustrous, snow-white fleece of the Angora goat, from far off Turkey.

Through countless centuries mohair fabrics have been prized for their beauty and durability. Today Chase VELMO is recognized as an aristocrat of the textile world and the supreme achievement in the art of mohair velvet weaving.

TELMO upholstered motor cars, when re-sold, invariably bring higher prices. You are allowed from $50 to $150 more for your closed car because dealers save the cost of re-upholstering.

Priendship With Whitman

The deep impress of the years passed in Washington during and fter the Civil War is apparent in copious extracts from his notes, journal and correspondence. In Washington, Burroughs first met Walt Whitman, who exercised a great inuence upon his whole after-career. The measure of the imprint of that friendship is difficult to determine but that it was profound there is not the slightest doubt. From an early but that it was protound there is not the slightest doubt. From an early notebook appears a fascinating account of their first meeting.

Later he wrote: "For two years, therefore, I have been studying this wonderful man' and have come not bally to love him as a friend but to took at him as the greatest, sweetest soull if have ever met in the word."

And, again: "I am convinced that Walt is as great as Emerson, though after different type. The more I see to Walt the more I like him. . . He is far the wisest man I have ever met. . . He loves everybody and everything." And later yet, when commenting on the period when he was in closest touch with the "good gray poet," Burroughs declared: ." I love him as I never loved any man. We were companionable without talks fing." One readily understands from the pages devoted to this great friendship why Burroughs wrote two books on Whitman, only one of which wurvives, as the later effort completely eclipsed the former.

Many Admirers
The reader of these volumes is deeply impressed with the warm friendship Burroughs had with many notables of earth. While his relationship with Emerson, Carlyle, Alcott and others of that period was scarce-ly more than casual, with Whitman, osevelt, Edison, John Muir, and others of national and international fame, he was on terms of most iendly intimacy.

Burroughs' zest for nature in its myriad forms, his philosophical bent f thought, and a gentle nature which amounted to real genius for friend-ship, brought to him many warm-hearted admirers, much of whose correspondence appears in these

The torches were carried by footmen and policemen; then came the King, heavily wrapped up, with two of his gentlemen; then more policemen; then some stragglers of the night, attracted by curiosity or by the chance of a safe guide to Buckingham Palace. The procession came so silently out of the fog and vanished into it again that the spectator later in the night was not sure that he had not impained it. But it. one is also struck with Burroughs' great affection for his kin. His love for his brother Hiram was little short of pathetic, when one views the great gulf which sepa ated them intellectually. The fact that Hiram's childish nature needed a champion and defender seemed to call out from John an intense brotherly love. John an intense brotherly love. John an intense protherly love, beautiful in its expression. It is an appealing picture he draws of the period his brother spent with him during one winter, working at the beehives in the shed while he toiled with his essays in his study.

In a letter to Colonel Roosevelt after the loss of Quentin in the Great War, Burroughs shows his attitude on the conflict. "As you know," he writes, "I am not of the fighting kind but since this war began I believe my blood has turned redder in

An Unflattering Portrait

Ludwig never intended to give a description of the so-called Withelmian era in full; he merely wanted to paint a portrait of William II himself. DeForest Announces New Sound Reproducer

By the Associated Press New York, Nov. 28 DR. LEE DEFOREST, inventor, announces that he has patented an invention which he asserts gives clarity and absolute naturalness in the reproduction of sound on radio receiving sets. Correct amplitude in all directions is obtained, he said, and use of the invention makes it possible to dispense with the use of a horn to project the The apparatus was described as cylindrical floating membrane capable of uniform vibration over its entire surface, differing from

Howey possesses a magnificent back country development, position on rail, water and cross state highway routes, equable climate, assured by a frost barrier created to the north by the Great Lakes of the Highlands, an elevation of more than 300 feet above sea level, water almost identical in analysis with that of Poland Spring, and a $500,000 municipal improvement program, with a like sum being expended for private building, to develop to their fullest extent these natural advantages. London, Nov. 10 | his "table entertainments," in which THIS is the Saxophone Age. And although one cannot guess what our descendants will think of when they gaze at the instruents of jazz lying silently at last and inspire the hearts of our sailo in the glass cases of museums, we know, only too well, what our contemporaries say of each other. If It is only fair to the Government to emigration back to the Middle Ages and that they afterward withdrew it.

coat-tails of Mr. G. K. Chesterton.

At the moment the twentieth century, for all its marvels, is distinctly unpopular in the musical pro-fession. We see the arch-prophet of modernism doubling in his tracks even as far back as Bach. We also see those who, with his collusion, broke away from the prison house of a sterile classicism, returning and explaining that they had never really escaped—oh dear, no, they had merely been for a nice little walk. and forgotten to take the gaoler. In fact, the prodigal sons of academism are arriving home in such embarrassing numbers there isn't fatted calf enough to go around. The shortage of modernist husks must have been frightful.

Trend Is Conservative

Reaction is momentarily the strongest tendency observable in European music. Large numbers of composers and critics are in the predicament of the people described by Mr. H. G. Wells as so much engaged in gazing toward the past that they walk into the future backward. These, of course, must not be confused with those critics who gaze toward the future and walk backward into the nast. Mr. Edwin Evans asserted the other day that there is not a single musical critic on any big London paper who is not by constitution and emperament a conservative.

However, there are still quite a number of people — neither critics nor composers — who are satisfied with their musical present. They re-

Other works have not already changed their tune, had to be transferred from both millions are whistling, singing, and dancing to a ditty with the alliterative and inversive title of "Tea for same as when they are performed Two and Two for Tea"—or is it the other way about? A singular fact Strauss has in this work used artifice may be noticed about these popular tunes, by the way. The composer's of the fragments of some former name is familiar only to a tiny frac-work. He has arrived at that period tion of his admirers. In more in-tellectual circles the name of the composer is much better known than

A Momentous Discovery

Some years ago Mr. Nigel Playfair made a momentous discovery. He realized that large masses of educated middle-class English, and percated middle-class English, and perhaps other people, prefer their music to be about 200 years old. Disdaining work, although entitled "Parergon," the saxophone with its vulgar "meashead or tail of Stravinsky and his discordant fellows—who they vaguely believe were in some mysterious way and unsymmetrical in shape as they were barren of poetic imagery or coherent thought. New idioms, indeed! Submerged beneath a sea of harsh unrelated chords, and ear-torturing harmonies, they failed

Is it any wonder, then, that thousands, nay, tens of thousands, who felt like this were easily shepherded Mr. Playfair back into the musical eighteenth century, via Hammer-smith? It is true that this period reeded "touching up" a little. Lovat Fraser supplied a touch of genius to the stage and costumes, while Frederic Austin spiced up old Pe-pusch's score, with the result that 'The Beggar's Opera" was played ininterruptedly for 1463 times.

"Lionel and Clarissa"

The first fine careless rapture of Mr. Playfair's personally conducted excursions into eighteenth-century ballad opera has faded a little since 1920 Rut his latest pilgrimage with music by Dibdin (very much rearranged by Alfred Reynolds) provides two or three hours' pleasant relief from saxophones, gramophones, radio, revue and modern

Burney once regretted that John Sebastian Bach did not "extend his fame by simplifying his style more to the level of his judges" and "by writing in a style more popular and generally intelligible and pleasing." That is the pathetic, perennial cry of the musically bored. Charles Dibdin, for his part, did the best he knew to satisfy it. We are told that

"Whipped Cream" and "Intermezzo" bears this extenutating title, but "Joseph's Legend" and the "Alpine Symphony" belong to this genre, without excuse. "Parergon" is written for the pianist, Paul Wittgenstein, who lost his right arm in active service. This, however, did not lessen his ambition. He made up his mind to win an artistic career with his one arm, as Count Zichy had done some decades before. But his situation was particularly difficult because he was not naturally left-handed. We saw him, after the war, appear before the public. His playing well deserved recognition, but the number of compositions affording him a chance of success was very limited. Some com-

Some New American Works

They are, then, in large measure unoriginal. And yet they are, by com-pensation, shrewd. For if they have little message to give, they at least have the power to compel notice; they can make a considerable number of people give up a day from 10 o'clock to noon listening to them. Certain composers of high acclaim have recently appeared in the same light. The Italian composer, Ilde-brando Pizzetti, had a trio of his brought out a little while ago at the chamber music festival of the Li-brary of Congress in Washington, which yielded small communication and a good deal of alarm. The American composer, Deems Taylor, permitted the New York Symphony Or-chestrs to set forth last week a new piece, "Jurgen," which was slight in expression, though portentous in ex-pressiveness—a casual "All's well!"

in return for an obstreperous waking up of the whole camp. Still another American composer, Frederick Ja-cobi, offering his "Poet in the Des-ert" for baritone, chorus and orchestra, the other day at a New York

Friends of Music concert, told an old story with just a little more noise and flurry than any rhapsodists be-fore him ever used in narrating it.

-Uniformity in Style

Reticence, of course, is a more justifiable trait in Mr. Thompson, Mr. Luening, Mr. La Violette, Mr. Howe, Miss Boyd and Mr. Kroeger, who

A MERICAN music teaching, in order to find complete success, had to ally itself with the higher education, as anybody could see who attended the presentation of young composers' symphonic works, given under the immediate charge of the Eastman School of Music and under the general auspices of the University of Rochester today.

It could never become truly popu-lar until it was made unassailably academic, if the situation that has been brought about in this city proves anything. Whatever may be the rule in Europe, the conservatory idea had to be placed in association with the college idea in the United States, after some such manner as is illus-trated by the various faculties existing here.

Howard Hanson Conducts Howard Hanson, school director, and the Rev. Rush Rhees, university meeting at the Eastman Theater this forenoon, and each taking part according to the necessities of the occording to the necessities of the oc-casion, got an important matter going right. Mr. Hanson conducted the orchestra. Mr. Rhees assumed a merely informal oversight of pro-ceedings. Thus acting, perchance the man of lesser rank making the more important figure, they submitted five instrumental productions, four by young men and one by a young woman, to the judgment of the public.

Nothing, surely, could be more have been a more picturesque affair, if the Rochester Philharmonic men, who played the music, had performed under their regular conductor's haton. But it would have been, in composer to receive encouragement. Quite the contrary, it was one for him to show initiative.

Apprentice Work

Did the American composer, how-ever, take the utmost advantage of the opportunity thus thrown in his way? Certainly he fell below, in respect to aggressiveness and individu ality, the mark which he set at the Eastman meeting of last May.
That, no one need be reminded, is the regular way in music. The ood old times must always be better even when they are only six months in the past. Truly enough, Randall

As for the sixth Eastman score, a symphonic poem, "S. P. D. S." by Mr. Kroeger, this shows dependence likewise on Strauss, but it also evinces some faith in Rimsky-Korsakoff. Now Strauss has never formulated his orchestral theories in words. He has furnished an only words. He has furnished an only too plain exposition of them in his "Pon Juan," his "Hero's Life," his "Till Ealenspiegel" and his "Zara-thustre"

But Rimsky-Korsakoff has gone further; he has supplemented "Schéhérazade" and "Spanish Ca-

But in the uncharted area outside the three dimensions where my gallery has its being, human shibobleths have ceased from troubling, there is no convention of the painter's trade that I have not successfully defied, and (unheard songs being sweetest) these pictures shall I forever love and they be fair.

Foremost usually is the vision of Vasco da Gama on the high deck of the little Saint Gabriel as she breaks upon the virgin silence of Port Natal on Christmas Day, 1497 A. D. This is a broad and generous canvas. It reveals something of the quality of those great navigators whose voyages were no mere earthly voyages, but high adventures. Portugal and Spain, through their representatives, vasco da Gama and Columbus, pursuing the same ideal, the India of their dreams, flung into the lap of the world, one, the mid-islands of the Americas and the other South Africa, as by-products of their quest. Much of this is indicated in the stately figure of the great Portuguese sailor, as the Saint Gabriel, with tential ready and condings, feels her way into the fort available inlet since Alexa Bay forcers' calendars clustering round ("epigramophones." ... Clearly to convey the intention of the second canvas, it will be neces-sary to dwell briefly on the typical structure of the trees among which Durban nestles. When they think of him, the driving head of their convulsive struggle toward self-expression, their emotion transcends all lord. prehend that behind all his fantastic oquence lay a conception of a state adapted to their needs. The admirer of Napoleon and Washington was the projector of a policy that neither of those leaders would have accepted, but it was a policy suited to the extraordinary country of Simon Bolivar. And so his countrymen, in an abandon of grief, call him the greatest man in the world, and their regard for his memory resembles that of a devout family for happiness. heir regard for his memory re-embles that of a devout family for And you can say of them in gen-

He wan-a woman in decent black dress and dered from his father's house into a with bare feet has to be seen to be far country, where he soon found understood. And the present writer, voyaging along the Carrera Septima, past the Parque Bolivar, discovered an allegory of this side of the people's character.

Up there, beyond those magnificent englyting trees and inst. he cent eucalyptus trees, and just be-fore you come to the Military Col-lege, there is a small and ancient church. . . And going out of the hot sunlight of the street into that cool gloom, the traveller found the church full of poor women, with a lady who was painting a picture. She was painting the scene at the end of the building, where a num-ber of people were kneeling in front of an altar under a gallery. It would ber of people were kneeling in front of an altar under a gallery. It would serve no good purpose to dwell upon the young lady's skill. In the opinion of the writer, after travelling many miles through churches and galleries, many mediaval painters were not so very good. Suffice it she had drawn, recognizably enough, the scene before us, save that in the figure kneeling upon the steps she had apparently gone astray. The writer confesses he did not quite catch the drift of the allegory at first, noting rather the girl's face and figure, which were well enough, and her expression of frowning preoccupation with her colours, and her hat and dress, which was not so well. She had one of those indeterminate faces common among the women of her race, dark, with a stern mouth and peremptory brown eyes. They have an air of gloomy and cantankerous virtue, these women, that bodes ill for the success of a school of imaginative literature among them. In a novel of New Grands, all the wicked characters would have to be imported, and a female adventuress is so foreign to the character of the people that she would discover no peace on her caim and beautiful features. She knelt there in a glow of light, and a halo was faintly outlined about her smooth, shining hair. You may say, of course, with hard Northern perspicacity, that the young lady was a sloppy sentimentalist; and all I can say is, if you had seen her you would not say so. There is another deduction, which is to me the right one, that she knew exactly what she was doing. She was a realist. She drew what she knew was there, not what seemed to be there. And that is why her poorly painted picture seemed to the server to have a secret glory and virtue of its own. Whether by accident or whether by design, she had painted an allegory of her race. They painted an allegory of her race. They preserve, beneath the hard rind of austerity and reticence, a medieval love of virtue and obedience and the solidarity of the tribal clan. They have a capacity for the achievements of the saints, and the air is full of holy angels guarding them from harm.—William McFee, in "Sunlight in New-Granada."

WEEK'S REVIEW. OF FACTORS IN STOCK MARKET

Sentiment Improves as Securities Rise-Money Ease Looked For

NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (Special)—The eneral business situation continues to aprove. The stock market is regarded a being in a much more stable posi-as being in a much more stable posi-tion than it was a week ago.

Those who have professed a lack of confidence in the recoveries in stocks in the last two or three business days have claimed that they were due chiefly to short covering and that there had been a very small proportion of new buying.

While this may have been the opin-fon generally expressed in purely new buying.

While this may have been the opinfon generally expressed in purely speculative circles, those who were in a position to come near knowing the facts said that there had been buying for the account of speculators who closed their commitments before the big break in stocks began.

Yesterday little or nothing was beard in stock market discussions about the New York Federal Reserve re-discount rate. Although the governors of that institution did not make a definite announcement Wednesday afternoon as to what they actually had done it was taken for granted then, and also over the holiday and before the opening of business today, that no change had been made in the 3½ per cent rate.
The idea was frequently expressed yesterday that probably an advance to 4 per cent had been pretty well discounted.

Money Market Position

What seems to be of more importance than the question of an advance in the New York Federal Reserve rate is the position of the money market in this country, as well as at this financial center, as reflected in the quotations for both call and time funds. Yesterday the former was 4½ per cent for renewals and early loans. Later a 5 per cent rate was reported, but it is to be doubted that as much money was loaned at the higher quotation as at the lower. It should be remembered that it was Friday, the usual day for making demand loans over the week-end, and also that there was only one more chance for arranging accommodations before the first of the month. On that date large interest and dividend dishursements will be made.

It would not be at all surprising to see call money drop below 5 per cent within a few days. What is still more significant with respect to the money warket in a broad way is that time within a few days. What is still more significant with respect to the money market in a broad way is that time funds, even for the longest periods, have been offered freely at 4% per cent during the last two business days. On Wednesday, one of the most prominent interpational banking houses in this city took the lead in making such offerings.

Money Ease Expected

Money Ease Expected

This was taken by money brokers and borrowers of money, as conclusive evidence that those who direct the affairs of that great firm did not anticipate higher rates for money, but, on the pontrary, that it would work toward a lower level. In the light of these facts, broadminded and careful observers said that they cared little about the federal reserve rate being advanced to 4 per cent.

In circles in which things are done from a constructive point of view it was suggested that there was no occasion whatever, because of the general outlook for business, ta be in the least pessimistic. Only yesterday announcement was made that the United States Steef Corporation was operating at 85 per cent of capacity, the same ratio that has psevaled for a week or more.

What was regarded as more important with respect to the steel industry was the announcement that in, all probability the unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation at the end of November would show a good sized increase, although perhaps not as large as that at the end of October. The Iron Age reported that new business being received by the principal steel manufacturers is showing a steady but not rapid increase.

Auto Industry Prosperous

Auto Industry Prosperous

Some automobile manufacturers have announced that they are curtailing their production schedule somewhat, but only on a seasonal basis. Ordinarily, in the past, this step has been taken considerably earlier in the season. Both production and sales have gone forward close to the spring and summer basis, considerably longer than in previous years.

and summer basis, considerably longer than in previous years.

The leading automobile manufacturers have made large profits, and are in a strong financial as well as tradeposition. This has been evidenced by the clearing up of large bank loans that were made during the slump after the post-war boom, the retirement of preferred stocks and the declaration of extra cash and stock dividends.

The extent to which motor stocks have recovered from the severe declines, when the market was at its worst recently, has attracted much attention in speculative as well as investment circles. The idea ig growing that the automotive industry is on a much more stable basis than has been generally realized.

There is not much new to say relative to the petroleum industry. The latest production figures of crude oil disclosed a daily increase of about 12,000 barrels. The figures next week may reflect a decrease. However, this may turn out, it is known that the industry, broadly speaking, is on a more stable basis than it has been for a long time.

Rail Earnings Larger
Railroad stocks have shown a tendency to advance, but trans.

Them are still on a small scale in comparison with those in the Industrials. With the exception of the Missouri-Kansas-Texas lines and the St. Louis Southwestern and the anthracite coal carrying roads, the October statements being made public show good-sized increases, both in gross and net earnings, in comparison with October of last year. The increases in those two items in the case of the Atchison compared with big decreases in September of this year were regarded as particularly significant, in view of the heavy damage to the wheat crop in the southwest, and in some sections to cotton.

Wall Street does not seem to be specially concerned over what Congress may attempt in the way of new legislation. According to Washington dispatches an effort will be made to modify the Transportation Act with regard to railroad consolidation and perhaps some other features.

It is known, of course, that the matter of further reductions in taxes will figure prominently in Congressional discussions. The people are looking for affirmative action on this question.

MARKET OPINIONS

J. S. Bache % Co., New York; As far as investments are concerned, it would appear that there need be no great hurry to purchase, as we have before us the restraining influence of the re-entrance of Congress and the deliberative character of sentiment which the close of the year is apt to bring about.

Schirmer, Atherton & Co., Boston: We are of the opinion that after careful selection, good stocks should be bought on weakness from now on, tetting the motors, however, severely alone for the time being.

Hayden, Stone & Co., Boston: It is not improbable that oil, copper, sugar and railroad shares will provide a large part of the future strength of the market. Certainly they afford relatively safer speculations at this time.

Gramercy Park, playing on its own courts, was particularly impressive, defeating the seven of Montclair Athletic Club, 7 to 0, wihout the loss of a game. Frank di Salvo is now the coach of the team and has developed a strong organization, with several players just outside of the list trying for the places.

Only three matches were played between Columbia and the Fraternities Club, but all three went to the Columbia players, and with a default, in which S. R. Jandorf failed to appear for his match against F. D. Shaw, gave Columbia the victory, making other matches unnecessary.

Princeton Club, visiting the Crescent Athletic Club, scored an easy victory, 6 to 1, and Heights Casho disposed of New York Athletic Club by the same score. Both Harvard Club and Yale Club, the other victors, barely escaped defeat. The 1925 champions, Harvard Gramercy Park, playing on its own

ON HOCKEY LEAGUE

Although a meeting was held in the office of William F. Garcelon, yesterday, for the purpose of forming a strictly amateur hockey league between Boston and New York for this coming winter. Nothing has been definitely settled. Another conference will be held next Monday or early in the week at which time both a league and probably an Eastern amateur body to control hockey will be inaugurated. At yesterday's meeting were William F. Garcelon, Ralph Hornblower, Alfred Winsor Jr., R. L. Von Bernuth, representing New York Athletic Club and St. Nicholas Hockey Club of New York, John Stillman, representing amateur interests in the New Gardens, New York, along with Theodore J. Saucier, also of the Gardens and representing the Knickerbocker A. C., another amateur team for New York. The Boston Athletic Association and possibly the Pere Marquette sextet are expected to be the Boston teams, while the N. Y. A. C., St. Nicholas and Knickerbockers are spoken of for New York.

University of Washington is this year's Pacific Coast Conference football champion. The Huskies have completed their Conference schedule undefeated, the only team in the race which did not lose at least one game. Leland Stanford University, rests in second place while third place will go to the winner of the University of Southern California-Oregon Agricultural College game next Saturday.

The Conference season this year has been one of surprises and upsets. In defeat overtaking the team that should have won.

Among the three favorites—University of California, Leland Stanford University and Washington, the first has come last and the last has come first in spite of the warranted calculations of many of the most conservative football followers on the Pacific Coast. Early in the season California was conceded to have the best possibilities for titular honors. In general Leland Stanford University was ranked second and Washington third.

Coach Andrew L. Smith himself-

University was ranked second and Washington third.

Coach Andrew L. Smith himself stated that he had much better material for a championship team than he had last season when California won the coast title. And in Thina W. Imlay '26, E. F. Jabs '27, Richard E. Blewett '28, and Bert F. Griffin '26, Coach Smith did have a promising backfield combination, and what is more, had another set of backfield players practically as good. Add to this his heavy, shifty line and there were the latent possibilities for a championship team. Despite, its past-record of five consecutive Conference titles and its promise of power this fall, the California eleven met such formidable opposition that it could not deliver.

In spite of a brilliant last-quarter rally which netted California two touchdowns in three minutes, the Standard Cardinals, led by their-charging fullback, Nevers, won their farstyctory over California in many years. Nevers' spectacular smashes on the offense and his remarkable defensive work in backing up the forward line was mainly responsible for Stanford's victory.

IDAHO HAS SEVEN LETTER MEN OUT

Basketball Prospects for the P. C. Title Race Are Bright

MOSCOW, Ida., Nov. 23 (Special Correspondence)—Prospects are good for a strong basketball team at Unifor a strong basketball team at University of Idaho for the title race in the Pacific Coast Conference, according to Coach David MacMillan. More than 20 boys, including seven letter winners, and at least six able candidates from the former freshman squad, are counted on to furnish the talent.

squad, are counted on to furnish the talent.
Only two varsity players have been lost from last year's squad. The men who will not return are Guy Penwell '25, forward, and George Greene 27, guard. Othere members of last year's varsity playing again are Edwin Nedros '27, and J. R. Miles '27, forwards; N. D. Nelson '26, and Ralph Erickson '27, centers, and P. H. Lamphere '27 and H. E. Canine-'26, guards. Nedros and Miles played together two years on Idaho teams, last year-on the varsity and two years ago on the Nedros and Miles played together two years on Idaho teams, last year-on the varsity and two years ago on the freshman. They developed a flashy forward game together, and are expected to carry the brunt of the offensive play for Idaho. Waiter Remer '27, a veteran forward on the Idaho team two years ago, is returning to compete for his old position. Nelson was a member of the Idaho championship team of 1923-24 which won the Pacific Coast title. At that time he was named as guard on an All-Coast team. W. D. Field '26, guard, a member of the squad last year, will also be back.

The six men who won numerals on the freshman team last year are G. J. Jacoby '28, E. 'T. Beyer '28, and O. E. Chaney '28, forwards; H. I. Canine '28, center; and D. R. Kyle '28 and A. L. Dawald '28, guards.

Idaho's Conference schedule comprises 13 games, including a two weeks' coast trip during which the Idaho team plays every team in tho northern section of the Conference. The Idaho team plays home games with Universities of Montana, Washington, Oregon, Oregon Agricultural College, and State College of Washington, Oregon, Oregon Agricultural College, and State College of Wash-Ington.

REDS MAY BUILD NEW PARK REDS MAY BUILD NEW PARK CINCINNATI, Nov. 28 (BP.—Directors of the Cincinnati National League Baseball Club yeasterday appeared before the city park board and outlined a proposal for purchase of an unused tract of city property, where the club hopes to build one of the largest baseball grounds and stands in the country. The directors said they planned to build stands that would seat 65.00 persons. The park board tentatively decided to use the property as a municinal playground and athletic field, but took the baseball club's purchase proposal under advisement.

Cup-Many Spectators

BOMBAY, Oct. 17 (Special Correspondence) — The All-India Rugby football tournament, which was this year played in Calcutta and won by the Welsh Regiment, drew a record the Welsh Regiment, drew a record entry of military teams from all over India, with the result that there were several fine exhibitions of the game. The final of the tournament was in every way a fitting finish to the most successful season. The meeting between its going to take parf in a debate on college football at the Harvard variety eleven is going to take parf in a debate on college football at the Harvard variety of attention to the coming meeting. It is expected that Captain Cheek will oppose the present over-emphasis of this great fall sport. College football is great fall sport. College football is a great game and deservedly popular with the public, but there is no question about its being taken too seriously in many instances, and how to keep it on tis real plane is one of the big athletic questions of the day.

When the Yale varsity eleven elected P. W. Bunnell, quarterback, to the Elisia in 1925, they selected a man who had never started a game against Harvard. In 1924 he was substituted to E.

TRANSPORT IS AFRICAN PUZZLE

Development of Continent Demands More Rapid Movement of Goods

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON, Nov. 15-The method of transport of goods in Africa differs according to the various countries which make up this vast continent, but heretofore I. where been mostly very slow. The in an head, carry-ing about 60 popular, the ox wagon, with a capacity of some 6930 pounds. with its team of 16 oxen; the camel in the Sudan, the mula call, ponies, donkeys—all these have been in use since the white man demanded trans port. Now, with the increased production of the soil—cotton, ground nuts, cocoa, eereals, and mineralssome speedler means of getting all these things to the coast is neces-

That the agricultural development of African territories is closely allie with the question of transport and road construction is the main gen-eral conclusion of the mechanical $100,000 bond issue. The Tennessee highway commission will supplement to fund with another $100,000.

This highway will go through the area where, by act of the last Congress, a survey is being made by an army aviator, for a proposed new national park for the eastern part of the United States. The road now extends as far as Gatlinburg, but there has been no highway across the mountains. Piercing the Great Smokies, the highway also will shorten the distance to North Carolina and connect with a route from Michigan to Florida.

A decree has recently been issued in Russia with the object of protecting the people against the contamination of counter - revolutionary and inartistic literature." The libraries which serve the needs of the masses are to be purged of certain kinds of books. In the section of "philosophy, psychology and ethics," all books dealing with "idealistic philosophy, mentalism, occultism, spiritualism, theosophy, magic, oracles, dreambooks, etc.," are to be removed. The section on religion "must contain solely anti-religious literature." From the political section everything attacking Communism or advocating "a constitutional monarchy, a democratic republic, civic freedom, constitutional assembly, universal suffrage" and so on is to be expunged.

If any further proof were required of the essentially unstable foundation upon which the present régime in Russia rests this decree would supply it. Throughout all history the unfailing evidence of the eventual collapse of any form of government has been the attempt to bolster up its authority by trying to control the thinking of its subjects and to prevent them from having any access to information or ideas which might raise questions in their minds of the truth and sufficiency of the official viewpoint.

The ultimate foundation of Western democratic civilization is the conviction, consciously or unconsciously held, that there is such a thing as intellectual and moral truth, that it can be discerned and obeyed by mankind, and that the only basis for human progress and order is that the whole mass of citizens should be left free to search for and find Truth for themselves and to embody what they discover and understand in the laws under which they live. This does not mean that democracies are always wise. They certainly are not. Nor does it mean that minorities may not have a far clearer idea of what is right and true than the multitude. Some minorities are always ahead of the mass.

What it means is that the only real foundation for a stable and progressive community is that the whole body of citizens should be encouraged and permitted to think for themselves, that they should learn by experience to dis-tinguish for themselves between Truth and error, good and evil, and that the institutions and laws of the state should reflect as exactly as possible the state of mind of the Nation as a whole. Freedom always results in a measure of apparent confusion and unrest in human affairs which those who like to lean on or to exercise authority lament, for it produces a constantly agitated body of thought because of the active collision of Truth and error within it. But that agitation is essentially healthy because it is necessary both to thinking and to

The very mark of tyranny is that it is afraid of this process and seeks to protect its own authority by action directed at freedom of thought and toward enforcing obedience to its own opinions by every means in its power. Tyranny, indeed, rests upon opinion and not upon Truth. It is afraid of Truth and of every activity which seeks to make people think about Truth or take it as their standard and their guide, and it seeks to bolster up the authority of its own opinion by propaganda, by domination, by repression, and all the other methods of persecution familiar to history from the days of Daniel and Nebuchadnezzar to the Spanish Inquisition, and now to the Soviet Republic.

This does not necessarily mean that everything in Soviet Russia is wrong, that its whole vast experiment in Socialism and economics is valueless, or that the systems of its rivals are Much good emerged from the French Revolution and the Napoleonic age. But that part which rested upon the foundation of despotism was eventually overthrown, and only that remained, such as the code which safeguarded "liberté, fraternité, égalité," which were ideas true in themselves. So in Russia today. The system which seeks to sustain itself by discouraging or preventing the people from thinking things out for themselves is bound to crumble, and only that will remain which is true and helpful to the world.

Just as the people of the United States were beginning to congratulate themselves because of the alacrity and unanimity with which the Ways and Means Committee of the National House of Representatives had reached a decision as to the provisions of the new tax bill, comes the announcement that these do not meet the approval of the minority factions in the Senate, the Democrats and the so-called Progressive Republicans. Despite the fact that the measure as framed conforms to the views of the Administration, as expressed by President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon, the adviser of the Chief Executive in such matters, the threat now is that many of its important provisions are to be subjected to severe unfriendly criticism.

It has been announced that the effort of the Ways and Means Committee has been to produce and to recommend for passage a strictly nonpartisan tax measure. The document offered, it is generally agreed, does represent the deliberate judgment of both the Democrats and the Republican representatives who are members of the committee. Among the former is Mr. Garner of Texas, ranking Democrat on the committee, who, it is now insisted by critics within his own party councils, represents the extreme conservative element in both tax and tariff matters. Representative Rainey of Illinois, another Democratic member of the committee, claims to express the opposing sentiment of his partisans against the proposed reduction in surtaxes and the repeal of the estate tax rates.

But it is not in the House that the fight will be made. It is regarded as more than probable that the bill will pass the House before the holiday recess, and possibly before the reorganization of that body takes place. Upon its arrival in the Senate, however, the opposition promises to take definite form. Senator Borah disapproves of the heavy reductions proposed in the items mentioned. He insists, it is reported, that the general public can be given relief most effectively by a reduction of the rate on small incomes.

It is indicated that around the Borah standard will rally Senators Hiram Johnson, Brookhart, Norris, Howell, La Follette, Norbeck, McMaster, Frazier, and possibly Couzens. But among the Democratic senators it appears that Bruce of Maryland, and Edwards of New Jersey will support the Administration's bill. This may make possible the final passage of the bill substantially in its present form. But it is said to be probable that the opposition will prevent any decisive action until late in the session.

The Boston branch of the Foreign Policy Association is doing a genuine public service by holding today a discussion of "America's Problems as a Creditor Nation." The presentation of this question by such technically equipped disputants as Eliot Wadsworth, formerly Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and secretary of the World War Foreign Debts Commission; Harold G. Moulton, director of the Institute of Economics at Washington, whose report on the capacity of France to pay her debts caused so great a sensation at the moment of the French Commission's arrival in this country, and Rufus C. Dawes, a former member of the Dawes Commission and brother of the present Vice-President, cannot fail to be illuminating.

Many economists insist that the United States cannot long continue to be the great creditor nation of the world and retain its well-established policy of a protective tariff. They point out that it was coincident with Great Britain's assuming the rôle-of a creditor nation that she became a free trade nation, and some of them do not hesitate to suggest that the present decided movement toward protection in England proceeds from the fact that her position as a creditor nation has been gravely shaken. Other economists follow the lead of Prof. J. M. Keynes, who asserts that the payment of large sums from one nation to another, whether as reparations or as debts, is certain to be as injurious to the industries of the receiving nation as to the finances of the nation which pays.

These bolster up their position by pointing to the fact that although the Treaty of Versailles ordered Germany to turn over to Great Britain ships to be built in German shipyards for a period of years, the British shipbuilders intervened and had the delivery stopped before the first installment was completed, lest it ruin their own business. Trade experts apprehend that the burden on foreign nations will materially limit their purchasing power, and as a result will narrow their capacity as buyers of American goods. That very considerable body of public opinion which perhaps economists and politicians would classify as mere sentimentalism is inclined to look with some repugnance upon the idea of collecting from those who were the allies of the United States in war, monies expended for the prosecution of that war.

To all of these considerations the "practical man" offers the retort that this money was lent by the American people, that it stands as a debt against the American Government in the form of Liberty bonds, and that the Government owes it to the people to collect the debts, retire the bonds and thereby reduce the pressure of internal taxation. He also holds that questions as to whether the debt can be received when payment is actually offered, without injuring home industries, may be left for determination at the time proffers are made; and he in turn that Great Britain has already begun paying installments upon its debt without checking in any way the progress in American industry. The subject is a big one, as big and as fascinating as the something more than $11,000,-000,000 of the combined debts. Beyond doubt the discussion before the Foreign Policy Association, which we understand will be repeated in other cities of the Union, will help to throw light upon it.

Comprehensive study is to be undertaken by the Forest Service of the United States, directed

Exempting

From

by Prof. F. R. Fairchild of Yale University, in an effort to work out an acceptable and practical plan for the exempting of growing forests from the operation of state taxing laws. With the realization that vast

Taxation tracts of denuded forest lands the country over may again be made to produce merchantable timber under the processes of reforestation now being fostered by the national and some of the state governments, the reasonableness of exempting the lands thus replanted from the usual tax burdens imposed has been emphasized and quite generally realized. It is a well-known fact, of course, that heretofore the cut-over lands have been assessed at only a nominal value. Otherwise the tax levied against them would not be paid. Indeed, in many of the states vast areas of these lands have been sold for taxes, with no other buyer than the county. No doubt practical reforestation efforts have been hindered in nearly all the states by the realization that when it became apparent that the lands were being again made productive their assessed value would be proportionately increased. The injustice of taxing growing timber year after year for a term of fifty years is at once realized. Under such a system there would be no inducement for private or corporate owners to undertake extensive reforestation efforts. In connection with this commendable undertaking, which has as its principal objective the education of the people of the states in whose territory the great deforested areas lie, and the ultimate revision of the tax laws along the line indicated, there might quite reasonably be undertaken what would seem to be an equally necessary constructive reform. If it is desirable to reproduce the forests on their former areas, it is just as important that a prudent effort be made to preserve and conserve for absolutely necessary uses the timber now standing. In Michigan, Wisconsin, and in several of the states of the Pacific northwest, there remain large tracts of land upon which there is still a fair stand of growing timber of merchantable quality. From these lands the pine trees have been removed, leaving scattering stands of hemlock oak, maple and spruce. In many cases the ownership of these lands has passed to settlers and to manufacturers who, having bought the lands at a low price, have, in the years since the war, found it profitable to strip them of the few remaining trees.

What is proposed is that before these halfdenuded areas are finally stripped, an effort should be made to preserve the timber that remains upon them, together with the young trees which naturally spring up where the ground is protected from fires, and, by exempting them from taxation for a term of thirty or forty years, upon condition that timber removed be taxed as personal property, provide an important aid to the general plan of reforestation. Perhaps the owners of these lands find it necessary at present, if they are to realize the cost paid and the amount annually demanded from them in taxes, to utilize every foot of timber available. With this exhausted, unless the lands are adaptable for farming, they are allowed to revert to the state or county simply because they are not worth the taxes levied against them.

People of the eastern section of the United States will not fall behind those of the western section in the presenta-

Summer

Music

tion of summer music, if the advice of Edwin Franko Goldman, conductor of the Goldman Band, is heeded. On the contrary, they will adopt the open-air amphitheater idea and make it their own, no matter what arguments based on conditions of climate or on considerations of geological contour may be brought against it. Particularly the citizens of New York, according to him, have reached the end of trying to improvise an auditorium for out-of-doors, and must now see what they can do in the way of constructing an original one. They have, in his view, so proved their pleasure in assembling in the starlight and the moonlight, and listening to the interpretation of instrumental masterworks, as to be ready to build for themselves an arena of that modern type known as a bowl.

When Mr. Goldman speaks of summer music as thriving in New York, he is hardly to be disputed. The crowds that have sought the benches of the Lewisohn Stadium, College of the City of New York, on July and August evenings ever since orchestral concerts were instituted there, strongly justify his comment; and the throngs that attended Mr. Goldman's own band concerts on the campus of New York University the season just past, that gathered before his players in Central Park the season before, and that assembled at his call for many seasons on Columbia College Green, substantiate it still further. And then, were he to remark favorably upon artistic standards, he would continue to find verification. For the summer public, as programs and performances attest, desires music of the very same sort that the winter public demands.

Mr. Goldman has declared that the thing must come; and supposing he is right, the question remains, How soon do the men and women who sustain musical organizations want it to come? As for a location, there can be little hope, probably, of a site being found within the borders of New York City that will repeat Hollywood in California. This is a day, however, of engineers; and a moment, moreover, of acousticians.

It may be important that great symphonies and preludes be presented in surroundings such as Mr. Goldman has in contemplation, or it may be unimportant. But meanwhile, amphitheater or no amphitheater, bowl or no bowl. Beethoven and Wagner in the affections of the summer public of New York have without doubt come, for good and all.

Editorial Notes

In discussing in New York recently the German point of view regarding the ratification of the Locarno treaties, Dr. Paul Leverkuehn, of the German-American Mixed Claims Commission's staff, touched upon a point which is far deeper than surface impressions would indicate. "Speaking in the broadest sense," he de-clared, "Locarno is a state of mind." And he

The question is, Are the countries concerned really willing to draw the consequences of the treaties they accept, and will they continue in this state of mind?

Dr. Leverkuehn also urged that if Germany appears to be lacking in enthusiasm, this did not represent the real state of affairs, and he "Do not let these passing conditions obscure the reality of a sincere good will and a real desire to further stabilization and genuine peace. The Locarno treaties are approved by the majority of the people and the political

In view of the almost countless "cures" for tuberculosis which have obtained vogue during the last few decades-to spring up, flourish for a time and then pass into oblivion-one is not surprised to learn that an alleged immunizing method has risen above the horizon. But when one reads, on the authority of Dr. William H. Park, director of laboratories of the Department of Health of New York, that introduction of this method of vaccinating infants against tuberculosis may be introduced into New York City, it seems time to urge a protest. We read "experiments" on new-born monkeys and other animals have shown that the virus in question has certain "power," and "this being established, Calmette (the originator of the process) began to work with infants." 'work," we are informed, will be done on children in the United States until "Calmette's own 'experiments' have continued for another year.' Meanwhile these "experiments" will doubtless be watched with interest..

On Wings in the Early Morning Air

A thick mist, faintly gray with the approach of dawn, enveloped us in its clammy folds as we made our way out to the center of the 'drome. All around was the deep silence that precedes the break of day, broken in this case only by the unwearled song of a vigilant cricket and the occasional plaintive cry of an early-stirring

A low murmur of voices guided us to the long line of A low murmur of voices guided us to the long line of planes, whose vague outlines appeared one by one in line abreast across the field. Blurred figures were busily engaged in putting last touches to engines and rigging in preparation for the early start, while groups of leather-clad pilots and observers discussed the course of the proposed journey or listened to the final instructions of their flight-commanders. tions of their flight-commanders.

Soon after we had settled into our machine a rosy flush crept over the mist, betokening the rising of the engine broke out into a thunderous roar, foltaken up a deafening song of welcome to the day. A few minutes followed, during which the engines were run up to the full, and then one by one the dim mothlike forms on our left hurtled off into the void.

Our turn came; a fick on the throttle, and we were devouring the grassy dew-laden meadow at an ever-increasing speed, until quite suddenly the bumping and shaking ceased, and we were borne in calm, easy flight through the impalpable whiteness of the air. It seemed that we had hardly left the ground ere we leapt out of the mist into the clear light of day.

Ahead, the long line of our companions, climbing steeply, raced the young sun to the deep blue zenith. The mist fell away below, to become a sea of pearly wool, whose surface, delicately rippled into shadowy folds, reflected the color of sky above.

Out of it there projected in curious isolation, dark summits of tall elms, scattered spires of little Wiltshire village churches, and burnt-umber islands formed by the higher eminences of Salisbury plain, all slowly sinking village churches, and burnt-umber islands formed by the higher eminences of Salisbury plain, all slowly sinking into the constantly widening panorama. One by one below us the remaining six planes emerged from the mist, like a procession of busy bees setting out from some hidden hive on their sunlit quest for nectar.

As we circled up and up in the wake of the leader, the earth assumed the saucerlike appearance so familiar to airmen; hills and valleys merged into a shallow concavity, so that they were only distinguishable by the sunburnt vellow-brown of the grassy uplands, mottled sunburnt yellow-brown of the grassy uplands, mottled here and there with dark plantations of larch and fir, and the cool green of the poplar'd water-meadows.

White ribbons scattered broadcast over the countryside were roads and lanes; little wisps of cotton batting straight and regular, were railway trains. Little blots of speckled gray, nestling amid soft carpet-like woods or bordered by the silver thread of rivers, and shrouded in diaphanous mantles of blue arreads. diaphanous mantles of blue smoke, were towns and

Toward the horizon on the west the color of the landscape deepened to a pure indigo, and the patchwork of the Cotswolds broke into view. Further still, a fitting boundary to the view, lay the rugged chain of the Weish mountains, supporting on their craggy shoulders billow-ing masses of cloud, their feet laved, it seemed, by the gray-green waters of the Bristol Channel.

We had reached a height of 10,000 feet, when a white light dropped in a graceful curve from the leader; climbing ceased and we all veered off to right and left in search of our places in the rapidly evolving forma-tion. Two sweeping circles sufficed to complete the maneuver; a red light dropped, course was held to the south, and the Odyssey had begun.

Under the increasing power of the sun's rays, the patches of ground mist had thinned away, but a gathering haze narrowed the circle of visibility to a few miles, and threw a curious smoky zone over the lower third of the sky. Below us was the mysterious Ring of Avebury, a gray circle of inclined stone slabs, hoary elders set in solemn conclave, reminiscent of the grave Druids who established them before the dawn of history.

Not far away, partly absorbed in the modern asphalt road, and partly lost in fields and gardens, lay the old Bath. Road, running from the quiet red town of Mariborough on the east, down through Caine and Chippenham on the west; an ancient highway that has Chippenham on the west; an ancient highway that has felt the sturdy tramp of Roman Legionaries, has heard the harsh babble of swarthy Phœnician traders, wending their way up-country from their galleons in Cornish ports, and has resounded to the wild gallop of Dick Turpin's horse.

To the south, but faintly discernible over the barren Marlborough Downs, the venerable rocks of Stoneheuge were dwarfed to insignificance by the giant white hangars were dwarfed to insignificance by the giant white nangars of two neighboring airdromes. This dark group of monoliths, still an insoluble enigma to the scholar and antiquary, and the dread haunt of hobgoblins in the superstitious imagination of the night-faring yokel, look pathetically forlorn. No more than a queer heap of stones, amid all this aerial bustle of today.

The air was full of craft; small single-seater scouts rocketed up from below in strings of four or five, buzzed rocketed up the deads like importunate flies, and in the same instant were tumbling puppy-like thousands of feet below instant were tumbling puppy-like thousands of feet below in a headlong dive; still further down cautious novices circled monotonously round and round their parent drome, distinguishable against the dark background of the plain only by the red, white and blue identification circles on their upper wing surfaces.

Once or twice large twin-engined machines swept majestically across our path, leaving a wash that sent a shuddering heave throughout the squadron; elsewhere patrols, formations, and solitary machines traversed the skies in unresting activity, not unlike that of the multifarious insects which haunt the air above a stagnant pond

Soon all this was lost to view astern and we were left to the leisurely contemplation of our fellows. In the brightness of the morning they had a peculiar beauty that carried with it an atmosphere of unreality; the blue haze, obscuring the horizon and all but the vaguest traces of the earth immediately below, created a void where there was neither up nor down, nor any direction, an interplanetary space, in which the squadron, a con-stellation of suspended atoms, moved on in an unknown

With ineffable grace they dipped and nodded as they forged through the keen air; the dark brown-green of fabric, the steely glint of engines, the polished yellow of wooden stouts, and the warm tan of leather garments showed forth with unaccustomed clearness. The sunlight danced and glinted on swaying wing and fuselage, or caught in the whirling haze of a propellor, was thrown to us in a thousand shimmering fragments.

Of sound there was none but the vibrant hum of to us in a thousand shimmering fragments.

Of sound there was none but the vibrant hum of taut flying-wires, the thunder of the cloven air, and the deep pulsating roar of the multiple engines: an all pervading triad that tempted one to song.

And so we flew on over the kindly bosom of the New Forest and the sleepy sunlit hamlets of southern Hampshire, until a glittering, silver gossamer appeared through the haze ahead; it was the distant sea. J. B. G. B.

The Week in New York

Smokestacks are so useful for liners in the transatiantic service in puffing passenger rates up to the right height, that the S. S. Gripsholm of the Swedish-American Line, due in New York shortly on her maiden voyage, has been equipped with two, though she does not need either one. She is the first liner in the transatiantic service to be equipped with Diesel engines; and the exhaust from equipped with Diesel engines; and the exhaust from them, which sinks rather than rises, would leave a smokestack pointing at the sky in vain. Because the public rates power by the number of holes through which it can escape, however, the two funnels are included and escape, however, the two funnels are included and proudly bear aloft the insignia of the line. One of them, perversely, is a ventilator, carrying air down to the engine room, and the other is an elevator shaft. The engineers are thus placated with the utilization of waste spaces, and the exhaust is shot logically out back near the water line; while the public is preserved in its illogicality so that it can be more easily convinced that the Gripsholm is a sea-going ship.

If commuting is to remain the eighth and liveliest art, something must be done about a situation to which attention was called this week by resolution of the Board of Trustees of Valley Stream, L. I. Some of the town's most respected nocturnal inhabitants, it appears, accustomed, when nothing better offers, to go to sleep, are too frequently finding on their midnight journeys out from New York that they resume their self-possession, and take their exit from the scene, a station late. Lynbrook and Long Beach are thus becoming the unwilling depositaries of more unwilling guests, while Valley Stream, happy in of more unwining guests, while valley stream, nappy in the supposed possession of a loyal, if factional, citizenry, and the prospects of more, finds its greatest obstacle is being too easy to miss. The Board of Trustees, accordingly, has formally voted to ask the Long Island Railroad for an illuminated sign and a set of bells or whistles to bring the residents to their senses, and homes. This, it is hoped, will bring each nap to an accurate close; especially if, as the board neglected to ask, the company will have the added thoughtfulness not to do the same things for Cordial relations have now been established between New York City and the town of Majolati, near Ancona, taly. New York, very properly as the younger of the two, made the first overtures, through the Metropolitan Opera House, by presenting the century-old opera, "La Vestale," the masterpiece of Gaspare Spontini, one of Majolati's great. The production, which had been done only once before in the United States, and then in New Orleans in 1828, was carried off with, all the splendor with the Metropolitan is careble and sure by of which the Metropolitan is capable, and sung by a chorus so much larger than most Metropolitan choruses that Spontini might well have felt the fullness of his recognition amended the long delay. Majolati, knowing an olive branch readily enough, discerned this one as soon as word of the performance had spanned the sea. An executive committee of the townspeople, custodians of the Spontini monument, took official cognizance and cabled its response: "We beg the direction, the artists and the noble public of the Metropolitan Opera to accept and the noble public of the sherropointan opera to accept our grateful thought and approbation for the splendid performance of 'La Vesta,' the work of our great fellow-citizen." A simple gesture, thus, has brought to New York not only the gratitude of Spontini's birth-place, but also the knowledge of where it is.

In search of pets, the gamut of the animal kingdom, at least that part of it that can be trained readily to know their master's or mistress' voice, has been run through by girl students at the Columbia University through by girl students at the Columbia University School of Journalism, and they have now arrived at turties. A colony of forty-one at present are displaying their limited repertoires of tricks, or are themselves displayed, from favored vantage points in the rooms of residents in Johnson Hall. An alligator, several dogs, and a number of cats and canaries all played their brief parts and were expelled under the restrictions preserving the academic atmosphere. Even a mouse, further down the alphabet and much more adept at concealment, held but momentary sway before a forced departure. Turties came next, and with their subdued manner, if not easygoing way, they have held their posts. They have not yet contributed notably to higher education, but they at least have the negative virtue of doing less to hinder it.

symbolic share in the excellence of New York's A symbolic share in the excellence of New York so buildings is to be awarded by the New York Building Congress to the men who fit them together as part of its plan to revive craftsmanship. Certificates of merit, signi-fying that the holder had fastened his rivet, or fitted his joints with a neatness and precision beyond the mere requirement of fits wages, have been awarded in in-auguration of the plan to twelve mechanics engaged on the new Madison Square Garden. A special committee chose the deserving representative of each of twelve trades engaged on the building, and Stephen F. Voorbees, the president of the congress, with an appropriate speech, centered on them the plaudits of the wider world. With the adoption of this practice, the builders of New York will be able to show their grandsons where fame lit on their achievements, the which they might even see, but for the unfortunate altitude and wall of bricks, plaster and stone.

England of the 1820's, the roaring land of bluff squires and galloping horses, captured by contemporary cartoonists for after-dinner albums and hall walls, is living over his headlong career in an exhibition lasting until Dec. 10 at the Grolier Club. Red jackets for the chase, their various angles commemorating the passing and sometimes flighty fortunes of the riders, dominate the scene, with correspondingly softer hues to match the other less rugged pursuits of happiness. The puzzlement of novices, the contrary whims of riders and horses, or of novices, the contrary whims of rivers and norses, of the vagaries of drawing-room sports, were brought to paper by the friendly, but often uncomfortably observant eyes of Henry Alken, John Leach, George and I. R. Cruikshank and, others of their time, with an aptness that both planted their illustrations all over England and made them still prized and scintillating today.

"American Composers to Have a Chance"

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: I notice in the issue of The Christian Science Monitor of Saturday, Nov. 7, an editorial entitled "American Com-posers to Have a Chance."

will make a statement concerning certain investigations, presumably about the lack of appreciation of the American composer. It implies in the last paragraph that the Boston Symphony, New York Philharmonic and Philadelphia Orchestras have been remiss in the performance of their obligations to the American composer, if there is such an obligation.

Is such an obligation.

I shall be very glad to receive a copy of the statement which Mr. Hanson has sent out, and of the second statement which you imply is to be issued. It is quite possible that I may have something to say on behalf of the New York Philharmonic and Philhadelphia Orchestras.

ARTHUR JUDSON,

Managar Philharmonic Society of New York

Manager, Philharmonic Society of New York New York, N. Y.

Mr. Hanson, having been notified from the Eastern Bureau of The Christian Science Monitor that objection is taken to his comment, as reproduced on the Editorial Page of Nov. 7, writes a reply, dated University of Rochester, Eastman School of Music, Office of the Director, Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 18, in which he says:

I read your editorial with a great deal of interest. It seems to me that you hit the nail exactly on the head. It expresses my feeling exactly, as taken from my interview. The correct date of that interview was Oct. 25, 1925. If you want me to answer at any time the attacks on this editorial I will, as I think I have considerable data on hand which prove my arguments.

The particular part of Mr. Hanson's comment on which the editorial in question is based, runs as follows: I hope to present at a later time certain material which will show in a concrete manner the status of the American orchestral composer in America. We are too apt to judge the status of the American composer from the point of view of New York City, which city in my estimation knows less about native composition than Chicago, Los Angeles or Rochester.

The Wets and Their Losing Fight

To the Editor of THE CHEISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: The Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:
That extensive reprint from the Manufacturers Record in the Monitor of Nov. 5, is very valuable. I thank you. The testimony of H. M. Leland is passing strong. If our wet friends were not involved in a crime that destroys the sense of honor, as President Frost of Berea College so well says, they would acknowledge themselves answered. What they will doubtless say is that it is just as easy to deay hypocrisy as to practice it; unable to use the truth in their business they will deny
the ability of the drys to talk straight.

the ability of the drys to talk straight.

The Monitor is a daily satisfaction.
